

Next Generation Procurement Tool and Practice

Africa is the final frontier when it comes to development and has seen an explosion in infrastructure investments by both governments and private sector alike. One of the biggest drawbacks in getting all this projects up and running is the availability of materials and skills in different parts of the continent and also the knowledge of geographic players, both large and small in specific parts of the continent. Pretune Technologies is currently developing a tool which will put procurement processes at the fingertip of the buyer and seller. This tool will make pricing of materials and services more transparent and more consistent as benchmarks will have to be published. We will inform you when the tool is ready for launch. The next few weeks will lead to the genesis of the next generation procurement tool in the continent which will be the worldwide industry standard.